

2 Post-Doctoral Researchers in Economic History

(3-year fixed term)

Salary: up to € 44,000 per annum

Bocconi University in Milan seeks to employ two postdoctoral researchers in economic history as part the research project financed by the European Commission Horizon 2020 Program. The project investigates the impact of World War I on regional economic development and industrial organization in the Habsburg Empire and its successor states. The research team will study how war spending affected industry location and regional economic structure, and business networks in Central Europe, using modern methods in historical economic geography and comparative business history. We will also trace the evolution of working wages at the regional level across the war.

Spoils of War: The economic consequences of the Great War in Central Europe

Scientific coordinator: Dr Tamás Vonyó (<http://didattica.unibocconi.eu/mypage>)

Host institution: Dondena Center (<http://www.dondena.unibocconi.it>)

Both positions require a completed PhD or equivalent in economic history or economics, and are tenable for a fixed term of maximum 3 years starting on 1/3/2019 (flexible).

We offer a very competitive salary. Applicants from outside of Italy, who do not have fiscal residence in Italy, are entitled to ninety-percent abatement on personal income tax for the entire duration of the research contract.

For further details on the job specifications, required qualifications, financial compensation, the application process, and the required application documents, please see the attached official job advertisement of Bocconi University. If you wish us to consider a yet unpublished job-market paper besides your list of publications, please include a PDF copy of the paper. You need not submit copies of published research articles.

Applications must be submitted using the application form that you can find on the last page of the official advert. Please send your application together with the required documents by email to recruiting_ricerca@unibocconi.it no later than 5 p.m. on 1/12/2018. We aim to interview the most promising candidates via Skype before 20/12/2018.

If you have any question or you would like to seek further information about the position, please email Dr Tamás Vonyó at tamas.vonyo@unibocconi.it.